"A creative explosion and charming celebration of the humble scone . . . you may never eat an ordinary scone again – be warned." – Angel Adoree, author, The Vintage Tea Party Book "Just about the most charming food book I've come across this year." – Independent

Liam D'Arcy and Grace Hall run a market stall on London's trendy Broadway Market, selling traditional scones with a twist.

This little book is exactly as expected, little book with great scones recipes! I gave a four star because it would have been nicer with photos but I am enjoying the recipes. Very easy to approach and final product has been husband and toddler approved.

I like it, but it is small and the print is a bit hard to read. Otherwise it has some great combinations I will try!

The raspberry scone recipe is excellent. The small scones are moist and soft on the inside, slightly crispy on the outside, and full of the fresh taste and aroma of raspberries. Perfect!

I have been on a quest to make the perfect scone from scratch after years of fairly lame recipes and packaged mixes. I didn't realize how sad they all were until I tried The World's Most Delicious Scone at Holyroodhouse. Then the quest intensified because I was determined to make one just as good. I happened upon this little book in Edinburgh and am I happy I did! I just made the cherry almond scones and even though I used cranberries and vanilla (just because I didn't have almond extract) they are FABULOUS and I dare say even could compete with the magical Holyrood scone. I am a self-proclaimed baking nerd and ordered a great scale (Ozeri Pronto Digital Multifunction Kitchen and Food Scale, Elegant Black-perfect!) and happily weighed out all of my ingredients, mixed and chaffed and made my own scone magic. I can't wait to try more recipes. Thank you so much!!!
