Nancy Bonvillain is a professor of anthropology and linguistics at Bard College at Simon's Rock. She is author of over twenty books on language, culture, and gender, including a series on Native American peoples. In her field work she studied the Mohawk and Navajo, and she has published a grammar and dictionary of the Akwesasne dialect of Mohawk. She received her PhD from Columbia University in 1972 and has taught at Columbia University, The New School, SUNY Purchase and Stonybrook, and Sarah Lawrence College.

This wasn't the easiest to read good information and excellent material but hard to navigate and was not for a beginner class more so for advanced or someone in linguistics (major).

Some of the definitions are poorly written and confusing. Not a fan.

Great condition

Ordered book for my class as was directed by instructor. I basically went through the entire book and there were a few chapters that I enjoyed more than others.

Rented it for my linguistics class, a little too cut and dry in my opinion, but good information overall.

Great

good rental experience

I honestly hate this book. The layout and organization of the information is unclear and sporadic.
