Dorothy Harrer was one of the key teachers at the Rudolf Steiner School in New York City in the middle of the last century. Her husband, William Harrer, was also a leader in the school for many years. Together they founded Camp Glenbrook in New Hampshire, their country farm-turned camp still used today by teachers and their classes and for summer camp for children used by the Waldorf School of Garden City and some from the Rudolf Steiner School in New York City. Other books by Mrs. Harrer include Chapters from Ancient History, An English Manual for the Elementary School, Math Lessons for Elementary Grades, and Nature Ways in Story and Verse.
